This subgroup created ICUTAR (a tentative name only at this time) that aims to bring together individuals who have been the recipients of college/university teaching awards at the national level to leverage national concerns on teaching and learning issues.

Through our combined efforts we can become an effective voice that influences policy makers in our home institutions, in our disciplinary or professional societies, at different levels of governments and ultimately to the public on matters relating to the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning.

We invite all national teaching award winners to join ICUTAR. For now, we are approaching the following programs:

- Australian Awards for University
- Teaching—3M Teaching Fellowships (Canada)
- National Teaching Fellowships (UK)
- Carnegie Scholars and CASE Award winners (USA)
- Tertiary Teaching Excellence Award (New Zealand)

We want you to be aware of our efforts and that we are asking your assistance in identifying (names and contact information) recipients of these awards from your organizations in the last ten years. We look forward to any additional ideas you might have in moving our agenda forward.
