EDC Accreditation of Programs

What is it?

EDC accreditation involves a rigorous process of peer review. Two reviewers engage in a scholarly professional conversation exploring the merits of a given program. If the program meets the EDC accreditation requirements, accreditation is awarded. Subsequently program providers may use the EDC logo on certificates awarded to participants on the program.

How do I get it?

Visit the website (see below) to obtain a copy of the accreditation documentation. Submit a completed application to the committee. Two reviewers will contact you to arrange meetings (in person or virtually).

What does it cost?

The EDC Accreditation process is free of charge, but there is an expectation that the institute involved will provide two reviewers who will engage in subsequent reviews (appropriate guidance and mentoring will be provided).

Do you have a program for instructors or teaching assistants, that you would like to see awarded with EDC Accreditation? If so, visit here for details
